Forecast for Monday 12 Oct 2020

Weather: Rain turning increasingly widespread through the early hours to leave a dull and wet start across all ranges. Skies will clear across the West Coast from late morning before extending to the eastern ranges by early to mid-afternoon, but there is some uncertainty in the forecast on this timing. A few sharp showers will spread south across Mull and western Lochaber through evening, wintry above 800m.

Chance of cloud free mountain/hill tops above 800m: No chance through much of the morning with the cloud base widely around 400-600m. Improving to 80% as skies clear from the west, with low cloud then largely confined to passing showers.

Visibility: Widely less than a kilometre or so at height in rain with persistent fog and nearly constant rain making navigation difficult. Gradual but significant improvement from the west through the day.

Met Office Aberdeen Meteorologist's View
A cold feeling day in the hills with wet and breezy conditions. Note freezing levels lowering below summits through afternoon.

Forecast for Tuesday 13 Oct 2020
Weather: Clear skies through the early hours then a cold, bright start, especially for the south and west. Cloud will soon thicken from the north to bring a short spell of rain, principally to The Trossachs but also perhaps towards Glen Coe. A dry, clear afternoon and evening will follow.

Maximum wind: Northeast 20-25mph gusting up to 35mph at times, easing through evening.

Chance of cloud free mountain/hill tops above 800m: 90% initially and from afternoon, falling to 20% across the east through mid to late morning as cloud and rain sink southwards, but the west coast likely remaining clear.

Visibility: Areas of poor visibility across the east through morning associated with the band of rain sinking southwards. Away from this, no issues expected.

Temperature: Glens: 3-5C rising 10-12C.
At 800m: 2-4C.
Freezing level: 1200m but rising above summits for a time through morning.
